Groups honored for philanthropy

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

Salem Computer Center owner Frank Zamarelli said his father, big Frank, taught him to leave his community a little better than he found it.

His unending practice of that advice, and the philanthropic practices of two other local groups, the Salem High School Alumni Association and the United High School cheerleaders, were recognized recently as outstanding.

The Mahoning-Shenango Chapter of the Association of Fundraising Professionals honored them during the 2012 National Philanthropy Day awards luncheon last month, recognizing Zamarelli and the Salem Computer Center as Outstanding Small Business, the United cheerleading squad as Outstanding Young Philanthropist and SHSAA with Special Recognition for Valley Impact.

For the 2011-2012 United cheerleaders, their efforts focused on helping one individual, former cheerleader and 2008 United graduate Alissa Boyle, who was seriously injured coming to the aid of an accident victim on the side of a Pennsylvania highway. Their Cheers for Alissa campaign, though, not only resulted in much-needed financial assistance to cover some of Boyle's medical expenses, but also brought together the entire United community for a one-day fundraising event.

In the program bio about the cheerleaders, it was noted that "when young people are faced with a great need, it might be easy for them to say that the problem is too large and their resources are too limited to make a difference. But the cheerleading squad at United High School did not focus on the size of the problem. Rather, they focused on what they could do to find a solution."

"We're proud of them," United High School Principal Bill Young said.

He said much like Alissa's positive outlook about what she was facing, "Cheers for Alissa was a positive, uplifting way of letting her know the people in the community were there for her."

With help from cheerleading coaches Renee Congo and Stacey Zines, the cheerleaders put together activities other students would support and came up with a plan the whole community and people in other communities could support. The day-long Cheers for Alissa event included a silent auction, bake sale, face painting, corn hole tournament, basketball throw, soccer kicking contest and manicures and pedicures provided by a local salon.

Young said they came up with a pretty novel idea and it was an honor for them to be recognized. He said their leadership is to be commended.

"Cheers for Alissa grew to involve the entire community, but it started with the energy and determination of the United cheerleading squad — a great example of young philanthropists," the program bio said.

Lawmakers make last ditch effort to avoid fiscal cliff

WASHINGTON (AP) — The end game at hand, the White House and Senate leaders made a final stab at compromise Friday night to prevent middle-class tax increases from taking effect at the turn of the new year and possibly block sweeping spending cuts as well.

"I'm optimistic we may still be able to reach an agreement that can pass both houses in time," President Barack Obama said at the White House after meeting for more than an hour with top lawmakers from both houses.

Surprisingly, after weeks of post-election gridlock, Senate leaders sounded even more bullish.

The Republican leader, Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, said he was "hopeful and optimistic" of a deal that could be presented to rank-and-file lawmakers as early as Sunday, a little more than 24 hours before the year-end deadline.

Said Majority Leader Harry Reid: "I'm going to do everything I can" to prevent the tax increases and spending cuts that threaten to send the economy into recession. He cautioned, "Whatever we come up with is going to be imperfect."

House Speaker John Boehner, a Republican who has struggled recently with anti-tax rebels inside his own party, said through an aide he would await the results of the talks between the Senate and White House.

Under a timetable sketched by congressional aides, any agreement would first go to the Senate for a vote. The House would then be asked to assent, possibly as late as Jan. 2, the final full day before a new Congress takes office.

Officials said there was a general understanding that any agreement would block scheduled income tax increases for middle class earners while letting rates rise at upper income levels.

Democrats said Obama was sticking to his campaign call for increases above $250,000 in annual income, even though in recent negotiations he said he could accept $400,000.

The two sides also confronted a divide over estate taxes.

Obama favors a higher tax than is currently in effect, but one senior Republican, Sen. Jon Kyl of Arizona, said he's "totally dead set" against it. Speaking of fellow GOP lawmakers, he said they harbor more opposition to an increase in the estate tax than to letting taxes on income and investments rise at upper levels.

Also likely to be included in the negotiations are taxes on dividends and capital gains, both of which are scheduled to rise with the new year.

Also the alternative minimum tax, which, if left unchanged, could hit an estimated 28 million households for the first time with an average increase of more than $3,000.

In addition, Obama and Democrats want to prevent the expiration of unemployment benefits for about 2 million long-term jobless men and women, and there is widespread sentiment in both parties to shelter doctors from a 27 percent cut in Medicare fees.

The White House has shown increased concern about a possible doubling of milk prices if a farm bill is not passed in the next few days, although it is not clear whether that

The Salem High School Alumni Association and Salem High School graduate Frank Zamarelli, owner of Salem Computer Center, were each recognized last month for their generosity by the Mahoning-Shenango Chapter of the Association of Fundraising Professionals during the National Philanthropy Day awards. The SHS Alumni Association received the Valley Impact Award in recognition of its financial assistance for SHS graduating seniors and those in college. Zamarelli and his business received kudos as the Outstanding Small Business for giving his time and money to local groups and causes. Salem Community Hospital Charitable Foundation Director LuAnn Haddad nominated both the United cheerleaders and the Salem Computer Center to be recognized for their generosity for the good of others.

For Zamarelli, it's a way of life, not something he said he does for recognition.

"I was flabbergasted," he said when told his business was nominated and then won.

Salem Computer Center will celebrate a big anniversary in June, with 25 years in business.

"That's a long time to be in your community," he said. "I'm grateful for the fact that the community supports me."

He credited the community's support with enabling him to do all he does for charity and for numerous

Gas drillers work on community relations

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Some gas drilling companies that spent years fighting, threatening and suing reluctant communities took a new tack in 2012: collaboration.

Some drillers in Pennsylvania have hired local residents to act as liaisons and ramped up communication efforts, the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review (<http://bit.ly/VGYgG2>) reported Friday. Most municipal officials the newspaper interviewed now give drillers credit for improving communication and responding quickly when problems arise.

For example, XTO Energy — an Exxon Mobil Corp. subsidiary — set up a community advisory board in Butler County, about 30 miles north of Pittsburgh.

“XTO (Energy) has been great to work with,” said Lois Rankin, a supervisor in Jefferson. “Each and every time there’s been an issue ... they’ve come through and complied and fixed it.”

That kind of effort was largely missing in the early years of shale gas development in Pennsylvania, said Gregory Kallenberg, a filmmaker who toured the state this year for a program Shell Oil Co. sponsored. “They were coming into the area ... without the attention they should give to communication and community relations that they seem to have now,” Kallenberg said by phone from his office in Louisiana.

A boom in drilling has taken place in parts of the Marcellus Shale, which lies under Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland and New York. The procedure called hydraulic fracturing, or fracking, has made it possible to tap into deep reserves of oil and gas. But fracking has raised concerns about pollution, since large volumes of water, along with sand and hazardous chemicals, are injected underground to break rock apart and free the oil and gas. The industry and many federal and state officials say the practice is safe when done properly, but environmental groups and some scientists say there hasn’t been enough research on possible pollution issues.

Some of the impetus to change comes from within the industry.

In a strategy paper on combatting the anti-fracking movement, analyst Jonathan Wood of Control Risks, a global consulting company, advised drillers to acknowledge that communities have legitimate grievances, in order to begin to repair a “crippling trust deficit.” Wood advised, among other things, openness, voluntary disclosure and “meaningful consultations” with communities, rather than “didactic information sessions to market the presumed benefits of drilling.”

Range Resources, a driller based in Fort Worth, Texas, has been at the center of several heated disputes. “We’re probably more active listeners now, so we’re probably better able to hone in on what local governments need from us,” said Jim Cannon, whose job at Range focuses on local government relations. “A couple years ago, maybe we weren’t as sensitive to it. ... Now we recognize how vital it really is.”

Some officials note that drilling companies vary widely in how they do business. “We have several energy companies that we work with and it’s amazing how different they are,” said Daniel L. Roupp, supervisor and road master in Cogan House, Lycoming County. “Some are very proactive ... and some are reactive. Then once we start screaming at them, they get around to repairing what they damaged.”

Indian woman who was gang-raped and severely beaten on bus dies in Singapore

SINGAPORE (AP) — A young Indian woman who was gang-raped and severely beaten on a bus died Saturday at a Singapore hospital, after her horrific ordeal galvanized Indians to demand greater protection for women from sexual violence that impacts thousands of them every day.

She “passed away peacefully” with her family and officials of the Indian Embassy by her side, Dr. Kevin Loh, the chief executive of Mount Elizabeth hospital, said in a statement.

After 10 days at a hospital in the Indian capital of New Delhi, where the attack occurred, the victim was brought Thursday to Mount Elizabeth hospital, which specializes in multi-organ transplant. Loh said the woman had remained in extremely critical condition since Thursday, and by late Friday her condition had taken a turn for the worse and her vital signs had deteriorated.

“Despite all efforts by a team of eight specialists in Mount Elizabeth Hospital to keep her stable, her condition continued to deteriorate over these two days,” Loh said. “She had suffered from severe organ failure following serious injuries to her body and brain. She was courageous in fighting for her life for so long against the odds but the trauma to her body was too severe for her to overcome.”

The woman and a male friend, who have not been identified, were traveling on a bus in New Delhi after watching a film on the evening of Dec. 16 when they were attacked by six men who raped her. The men also beat the couple and inserted an iron rod into the woman’s body, resulting in severe organ damage. Both were then stripped and thrown off the bus, according to police.

NRA envisions armed volunteers, but experts say trained police are needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The student’s attack began with a shotgun blast through the windows of a California high school. Rich Agundez, the El Cajon policeman assigned to the school, felt his mind shift into overdrive.

People yelled at him amid the chaos but he didn’t hear. He experienced “a tunnel vision of concentration.”

While two teachers and three students were injured when the glass shattered in the 2001 attack on Granite Hills High School, Agundez confronted the assailant and wounded him before he could get inside the school and use his second weapon, a handgun.

The National Rifle Association’s response to a Connecticut school massacre envisions, in part, having trained, armed volunteers in every school in America. But Agundez, school safety experts and school board members say there’s a huge difference between a trained law enforcement officer who becomes part of the school family — and a guard with a gun.

The NRA’s proposal has sparked a debate across the country as gun control rises once again as a national issue. President Barack Obama promised to present a plan in January to confront gun violence in the aftermath of the killing of 20 Sandy Hook Elementary School students and six teachers in Newtown, Conn.

Chavez out of sight, Venezuelans don’t know what to believe about his health

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — He’s getting better. He’s getting worse. He’s already dead. The whole thing is a conspiracy and he was never sick in the first place.

The obsessive, circular conversations about President Hugo Chavez’s health dominate family dinners, plaza chitchats and social media sites in this country on edge since its larger-than-life leader went to Cuba for emergency cancer surgery more than two weeks ago. The man whose booming voice once dominated the airwaves for hours at a time has not been seen or heard from since.

His lieutenants have consistently assured Venezuelans over the last week that Chavez is slowly on the mend and will be back at the helm of the country he has dominated for 14 years. But when will he be back? Will he be well enough to govern? What type of cancer does he have? Is it terminal? If so, how long does he have to live?

Government officials have not answered any of those questions, leaving Venezuelans to their own speculations. The wildest conspiracy theories run the gamut from those who say there is no proof Chavez is even still alive to those who believe his illness is a made-up play for sympathy.

“Everything has been a mystery. Everyone believes what they want about the status of his health,” said Ismael Garcia, a leftist lawmaker who belonged to the Chavez movement until a falling-out a few years ago.

Police identify man pushed to death in subway; mumbling woman sought

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City police have identified a man they say was shoved to his death in front of a subway train by a woman.

Police said Friday that Sunando Sen was pushed from the platform the night before. The 46-year-old Sen was from India and lived alone in Queens.

Investigators identified him through a smartphone and a prescription pill bottle he was carrying when he was struck by a 7 train. His family in India has been notified.

Police are searching homeless shelters and psychiatric units for the woman believed to have pushed him. Witnesses say she was mumbling before she shoved him without warning. It’s the second time this month a man has been pushed to his death on the subway tracks.

Central African Republic’s neighbors agree to send military contingent

BANGUI, Central African Republic (AP) — Central African Republic’s neighbors agreed on Friday to dispatch a contingent of soldiers to intervene in the troubled country, where a coalition of rebel groups is seeking to overthrow the president of nearly a decade.

Representatives from the 10-nation Economic Community of Central African States meeting in Gabon, though, did not specify how many troops they could contribute nor did they outline how quickly the military assistance would arrive.

President Francois Bozize had pleaded for international help Thursday as fears grew that the rebels would attack the capital of 600,000 next. Former colonial power France already has said that its forces in the country are there to protect French interests and not Bozize’s government.

“We are now thinking about the arrangements to make so that this mission can be deployed as quickly as possible, said Gabon’s Foreign Affairs Minister Emmanuel Issoze-Ngondet.

Jean Harris, convicted of killing her lover, ‘Scarsdale Diet’ doctor, dies at age 89

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Jean Harris, the patrician girls’ school headmistress who spent 12 years in prison for the 1980 killing of her longtime lover, “Scarsdale Diet” doctor Herman Tarnower, in a case that rallied feminists and inspired television movies, has died. She was 89.

Harris died Sunday at an assisted-living facility in New Haven, her son, James Harris, said Friday.

She had claimed the shooting of Tarnower, 69, was an accident. Convicted of murder in 1981, Harris suffered two heart attacks while serving her sentence in the Bedford Hills women’s prison north of New York City. She was granted clemency by then-Gov. Mario Cuomo when she underwent heart bypass surgery in December 1992 and was released on parole three weeks later.

She later founded Children of Bedford Inc., a nonprofit organization to provide scholarships and tutoring for children of female prison inmates.

Her trial for shooting Tarnower, the millionaire cardiologist famous for devising the Scarsdale Diet — a weight-loss book and sensation of the 1970s named for the New York suburb where he practiced — brought feminists rallying to her defense.

Wisconsin couple says pet chicken alerted them to blaze at home

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A Wisconsin couple says clucks, not fire trucks, helped them escape a blaze at their home.

Dennis Murawska, 59, said a pet chicken named Cluck Cluck woke his wife Susan Cotey, 52, with loud clucking from its cage in the basement two floors below about 6:15 a.m. Thursday. The couple’s two cats also were running around the main floor.

Murawska said he had been half awake but didn’t know about the fire because the smoke alarms hadn’t gone off. He realized something was wrong when his wife got up. “The chicken gets quite vocal when she gets excited,” he said.

Cluck Cluck came from a nearby farm in Alma Center, about 135 miles east of Minneapolis, Murawska said. When the chicken began wandering over to his house, his neighbor said he could kill it because it wasn’t producing any eggs. But Murawska felt sorry for Cluck Cluck because she had a mutated foot and decided to keep her. He fed the bird and built a coop, and then his wife let Cluck Cluck into the basement on cold nights. “I spent way more money than I ever should’ve,” Murawska said by telephone. “I guess it paid off.”

The couple escaped, and firefighters found the chicken in its cage and one of the cats alive in the basement.

Carolyn Jane Cleveland

SALEM — Carolyn Jane Cleveland, 83, of Salem died at her home lovingly surrounded by family at noon on Thursday, Dec. 27, 2012.

Born Jan. 7, 1929 in Salem she was the daughter of the late Hobart M. and Ethel “Judy” Weingart Butcher.

Carolyn was a 1947 graduate of Salem High School and held a Bachelor of Arts degree in home economics as a graduate of Heidelberg College. She married her late husband, Alan H. Cleveland on March 3, 1951.

Her love of children led her to be the founder in 1969 of the First Christian Church Pre-School in Salem where she worked until she retired in 1999.

An avid reader, Carolyn loved to cook and for many years when she was physically able to do so, she enjoyed working in the garden. Her ability to counsel and give advice was a gift to many people. As a member of the First Christian Church, she served as a Sunday School and Bible School teacher, deaconess, Prayer Warriors leader, Christian Women’s Fellowship member, Rachel Group member and more recently, a member of the “Fluff & Fold” group.

Carolyn had also been actively involved in many other groups and endeavors in the community. She was a member of the Red Hats Club, the Salem Book Club, the Columbiana County Home Economics Association, and a former Quota Club member. She proudly held leadership positions in each of these organizations. For many years, she also served as a judge for the baked goods at the Canfield Fair. Carolyn and her husband, Al, were co-owners of The Shoe Tree in downtown Salem and she was involved as a host of a morning talk show on radio station WSOM.

As a believer in angels, Carolyn had a collection of over 200 angel figurines many of which were featured at last year’s New Year’s Eve Salem celebration held at the Salem Historical Society. She began giving oral presentations to groups in the mid 1990s and many knew her as a self-described angel enthusiast.

Carolyn loved the ocean and the beach and enjoyed many family vacations in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

Survivors include a daughter, Audrey Cleveland Null of Salem and husband, Peter M., son-in-law William A. Mowery, and grandson, Matthew A. Mowery.

Other survivors include a brother, Edward H. Butcher and sister-in-law, Lois A., and nephew Hobart E. Butcher all of Salem, nieces Lynn Butcher Mather of Colorado Springs, Col., Patricia Bailey Lightner of Akron, Ohio, Annette Gibbon Cadwell of Naperville, Ill., and nephew John W. Gibbon of Chicago, Ill., and many great nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Cleveland was preceded in death by her husband who died on July 6, 2000 and her daughter, Kathryn Jane “Janie” Mowery who died on Jan. 18, 2012; sister Evelyn Butcher Bailey and brother David M. Butcher.

The family will receive friends from 5 to 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 2, 2013 at Stark Memorial Funeral Home. Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 3, 2013 at the First Christian Church on East Sixth Street in Salem with Rev. Leonard Moore officiating. Calling hours will be held one hour prior to the service. Burial will take place at Grandview Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Hospice of the Valley-Humility of Mary Health Partners, 5190 Market St., Youngstown, Ohio 44512 or the First Christian Church, 1151 East Sixth Street, Salem, Ohio 44460.

SHERIFF

— A Peace Valley Road, New Waterford, man reported Tuesday seeing a Jeep on his property and asking the occupants what they were doing. He was told they were checking tracks for the railroad company, but when he asked for identification, they left. The railroad company later told him it had no representatives in that area. He provided deputies with a license plate number which returned to a residence in Rockwood, Pa., not a business.

— A 10th Street, Wellsville, woman reported receiving a postcard saying she won a $100 Walmart gift card. When she called the number on the card, the person who answered tried to sell her a watch and would not give her the gift card. Walmart officials said it was a scam.

— A Darner Road, Lisbon, man reported receiving a $4,965 check from American Direct Lottery and being instructed to cash it because he'd won $250,000. It was determined to be a scam.

— A Lower Elkton Road, Columbiana, man reported he has paid rent and lived with his brother two years and now his brother has told him to leave. Deputies advised him this is a civil matter but that his brother would have to properly evict him.

— A Wheathill, East Palestine, woman reported being harassed by her ex-boyfriend, who keeps calling her. Deputies contacted him and cautioned him if he persists, he can be charged. The man agreed to stop calling.

— Responding Thursday night to a report of a man flagging down cars at Depot and Beacon Light roads, deputies found a man who said his father became irate and he was afraid, so he wanted to leave. His father was supposed to take him home but wouldn't, so deputies transported him to his East Liverpool home due to the time of night and weather conditions.

— Deputies responded to an apartment house on Rose Drive, Lisbon, twice between Wednesday and Thursday. On Wednesday, Paul Raymond Crosser, 24, Apt. 46, reported he was home with a friend when someone knocked on the door and when he refused to open it, George Faulkner Jr., 26, Apt. 8, kicked in the door and came after him. Matthew Faulkner, 20, Apt. 8, also came in and they both grabbed him, Crosser reported. A third man, Robert Crespo, 26, Roberts Road, Leetonia, reportedly pulled Matthew off of Crosser and tried to break up the fight. When they left, they reportedly broke both mirrors and a tail light on Crosser's vehicle. On Thursday, they went back to the Rose Drive apartment building where they found Matthew Faulkner being treated by a KLG ambulance crew. He told deputies Crespo had punched him in the nose for no reason. Crespo said Faulkner swung at him first and he was acting in self defense. This incident reportedly was related to the incident the previous night at Crosser's. Information will be presented to the county prosecutor for possible charges. Faulkner was transported to Salem Community Hospital.

— A Bye Road, East Palestine, woman reported hearing several rapid gun shots Thursday. Responding deputies also heard eight to 10 rapid gun shots but could not locate the source.

PERRY TWP.

— A North Lima woman reported at 11:41 p.m. Thursday that a co-worker entered her vehicle in the Freshmark employee parking lot without permission, while she was sitting in the vehicle, and restrained her and started kissing her. The responding officer was unable to make contact with the suspect. The matter remains under investigation.

— Police spoke with a man over the phone at 9:35 p.m. Thursday in reference to a custody issue.

— Police responded to the 1800 block of Newgarden Avenue at 7:03 p.m. Thursday for a report of a suspicious vehicle driving through the fields. The vehicle was located and the driver said they were given permission to drive in the field by the land owner. An officer tried, but was unable to contact the land owner. The driver was told to stop until his story could be verified with the land owner.

— Mark Cvelbar, 47, of Euclid, was cited for failure to control after the car he was driving traveled off of South Lincoln Avenue in the 1900 block at 4:28 p.m. Thursday and struck a tree. Two passengers in the vehicle were taken to Salem Community Hospital with minor injuries.

— Clifford M. Poynter Jr., 27, of Salem, was charged with domestic violence and taken to jail after police were called to the 1100 block of Prospect Street at 12:27 p.m. Thursday for a woman standing outside her apartment screaming for help. The report alleged Poynter assaulted the woman during an argument, leaving her with visible injuries.

SALEM

— A resident in the 900 block of East Third Street reported at 1:14 p.m. Friday that someone removed a bicycle from his back yard sometime between Dec. 17 and 23.

— Carrie Crawford, of the Counseling Center of Columbiana County office, 188 N. Lincoln Ave., reported at 1:06 p.m. Friday that sometime over the past couple of days, persons unknown broke out two windows on the south side of a storage building to the east of the business. A third window was also broken, but she wasn't sure if it was done at the same time.

— An officer collected a counterfeit $20 bill from the store manager at Circle K West, 780 W. State St., at 12:45 p.m. Friday and turned it over to the department detective.

— Officers helped the Columbiana County Sheriff's Office serve warrants in the city at 12:08 p.m. Friday, with two males picked up and taken to the county jail by deputies. A third person was not found in the city.

— A woman wanted to speak to an officer at 12:04 p.m. Friday about problems she was having with her son.

— A man in the 800 block of South Lincoln Avenue, reported at 9:42 a.m. Friday that someone entered an unlocked vehicle parked in his drive and ransacked the interior, but nothing appeared missing. The responding officer followed foot tracks in the snow to a residence south of the caller's home, but the tracks led to a cleaned driveway and could not be followed further.

— A barking dog was reported at 9:09 a.m. Friday in the 600 block of Franklin Avenue. An officer found a dog sitting on the front porch of a house, but the dog was not barking.

— Salem Parks foreman Jim Grimm called at 9:34 a.m. Friday to report finding a ring at Kelley Park on Prospect Street. The ring was placed in the police dispatch area in case anyone calls about it.

— Police were called at 3:56 a.m. Friday to Walmart, 2875 E. State St., for a report of a woman loitering in the lobby. Contact was made with the woman and she requested a ride to Youngstown, but said she had no money for a cab. She was provided a ride to her boyfriend's residence within the city of Salem.

— Officers responded to a Salem business at 1:23 a.m. Friday when a passerby reported a rear door open to the business. Officers checked the interior of the business, which appeared secure. Officers were able to secure the rear door.

— Officers assisted Perry Township Police at a Vine Avenue address at 2:38 a.m. Friday on a followup to a previous call.

— Police responded to a reported assault at 11:21 p.m. Thursday in the 800 block of East Sixth Street. The victim had visible injuries, but declined an ambulance being called. Statements were taken from the victim and witnesses, with criminal charges pending a review by a prosecutor.

— Police were called at 10:38 p.m. Thursday to a business in the 700 block of West State Street for a report of a man loitering at the business. Officers located him and identified him. He said he just stepped inside to warm up. He moved on without incident.

— Jimmie Exline, 36, of South Lincoln Avenue, was charged as a fugitive from justice after turning himself in on an active warrant from Bucks County, Pennsylvania. An officer had seen him at 1:35 p.m. Thursday walking on South Lincoln Avenue and had received a call about a possible warrant against him. The warrant was checked and the other county contacted, responding with a teletype to have Exline picked up. He came to the police station voluntarily.

OUR SIDE

Arrogance deadly in Libya attack

What an independent panel investigating the Sept. 11 attack that killed a U.S. ambassador and three other Americans in Libya determined was plain to thoughtful observers weeks ago. But so was another far more important point.

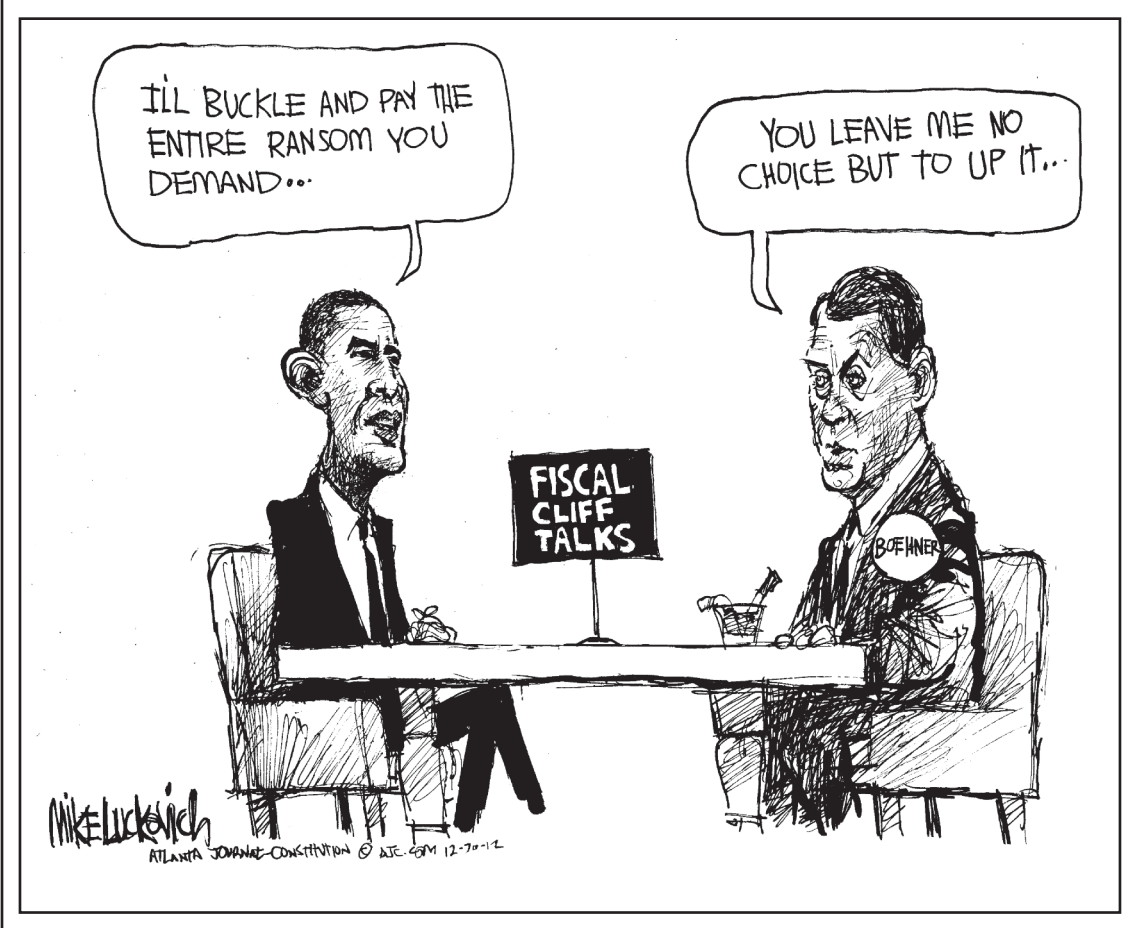

"Systematic management failures" in the State Department left the U.S. consulate in Benghazi, Libya, vulnerable to an attack, the Accountability Review Board concluded this week. It added there was no doubt the deadly Sept. 11 attack was mounted by terrorists.

Board members made 29 recommendations to improve security at U.S. missions abroad. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said she has accepted all of the suggestions.

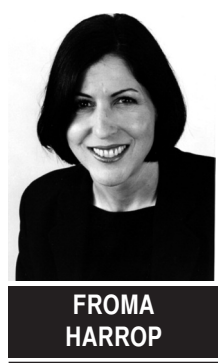

It was obvious within days after the attack that failures within the State Department were largely to blame.

But those lapses stemmed from a belief among many in Washington that the al-Qaida terrorist network had been destroyed. There was no evidence of that, yet arrogance led many U.S. officials to believe it was true.

It is an error Americans have made several times in the past — one we as a nation need to learn can have fatal consequences.

Republicans and the politics of threat

The people are sad. If holiday shopping is any measure of public mood, the joy vanished this year. The grade-school massacre depressed everyone, and now our rapid approach to the Fiscal Cliff has many scared and afraid to spend money.

The Fiscal Cliff is a phony crisis dropped on us by the politics of threat. Rather than further their goals through the normal process, so-called conservatives are using threats against the economy to get what they want. They tried it during the debt-ceiling fiasco of 2011. They're trying it now.

The Cliff is itself the result of that scandalous threat by the Republican right to let the United States go into default as a "negotiating tool" to force cuts in programs. To avoid economic catastrophe, the sides agreed to automatic tax increases and spending cuts, starting on Jan. 1, if budget deficits haven't been dealt with by then. They haven't. Removing $500 billion from a still-weak economy could send us back into recession.

Republican House Speaker John Boehner seemed ready to deal before Christmas, but the right-wingers in his caucus wouldn't let him. His Plan B proposal would have let tax rates rise only for those making over $1 million, and "conservatives" in his party still rejected it. Heaven forbid that folks with seven-figure incomes be asked to pay more in taxes.

Obama doesn't seem to have much to negotiate over and, in any case, is politically stronger this time. For one thing, if the Bush-era tax cuts expire (as was written into the law by Bush-era Republicans), Democrats could try to restore them for the middle class. For another, Republicans lost the last election. For a third, some responsible Republicans are finally standing up to their own extortionist, Grover Norquist, and his threats of political annihilation against any Republican willing to raise tax rates. They're telling him to take a hike.

Threats, threats, threats. One major tea party website is promoting a "Fax Blast" to end the "political cancer" of deficit spending. The recent election showed the tea partiers to be a menace mainly to the Republican Party, and the party elders are speaking up about it. The movement's power-of-the-threat is clearly not what it was, which is why the site blusters: "Just about the time they thought the Tea Party is growing weak from battle, giving up, WHAMMY! They get fax hammered with boiling hot faxes!"

Guess what. I don't care for deficit spending, either, and neither do most Americans. But we're not running deep deficits because we have unsustainable programs, as Republicans claim. Programs are sustainable if you sustain them. Things are paid for with tax revenues, and federal taxes as a percentage of the gross domestic product are at their lowest level in six decades.

No one likes a profligate government, and savings are there to be found. ObamaCare starts to address the enormous waste in the biggest source of entitlement spending, Medicare. Republicans want to slash its spending deeper through a voucher system. Fine, if they can sell Americans on their voucher plan, they should go ahead and do it. But note that they haven't, because the people want more medical security.

Since the right can't get what it wants through normal channels, it is trying the back door of threats to the American economy. We can all go over the Cliff, and everyone suffers. That'll teach us a thing or two. After Plan B went down, congressional Republicans' approval rating inched even lower to 26 percent. Perhaps the public is getting tired of being threatened.

The Jerusalem Post on CIA game changer:

The newly declassified 1987 CIA damage assessment bolsters official calls for the immediate release of Jonathan Pollard. While portions of the CIA document remain redacted, the disclosures officially confirm that Pollard spied for Israel, not against the United States.

Moreover, the document puts the lie to American allegations that have been used for over a quarter of a century to justify Pollard's continued incarceration. For example, Pollard's full cooperation with the prosecution was one of the welcome admissions in this document, as was the confirmation that the volume of information Pollard transferred to Israel was far less than claimed.

The CIA document also reveals the subterfuge used by the U.S. government to breach its plea agreement with Pollard. ... Another canard used to justify Pollard's life sentence is the claim that he did enormous damage to US national security. While the declassified CIA document does not deal with the damage done by Pollard, this issue is fully addressed in a concurrent damage assessment known as The Victim Impact Statement (VIS), written by the US Department of Justice.

The VIS, now a matter of public record, was submitted to the sentencing judge in 1987 as an aid in determining Pollard's sentence. ...

The US government's own words in the VIS, carefully scripted to present the most compelling case for the harshest possible sentence, reflect the damage as being nothing more than short-term friction between the US and unnamed Arab countries and a temporary reduction in bargaining leverage held by the US over Israel. Not the kind of permanent, irreversible, and overwhelming harm to US national security that some have claimed.

Pollard has repeatedly expressed remorse and was not charged with intent to harm the US. ... The newly declassified CIA damage assessment has again focused public attention on the injustice of keeping Pollard in prison. Now is the time for President Barack Obama, finally, to respond to all the official requests for Pollard's release by commuting his sentence to time served. There are no more excuses. It is time to send Pollard home.

Dec. 18
San Francisco Chronicle on Instagram seizes and sells your identity:

Instagram, the wildly popular online photo-sharing company, just made its 100 million-plus user base very angry. On Monday, Instagram released an "update" to its terms of service and privacy policies that will go into effect Jan. 16.

Buried among the usual paragraphs of legalese was this remarkable paragraph. ... Instagram's new terms also included this sneaky sentence: "You acknowledge that we may not always identify paid services, sponsored content, or commercial communications as such."

In other words, when you upload photos to Instagram, you're waiving your rights to control how those photos are displayed.

Specifically, when you upload a photo, you should expect that a company that's bought advertising services from Instagram can use your photo in their "display" without further permission. If you take a picture of yourself and your friends at a favorite restaurant, don't be surprised if that photo pops up again on Instagram under the restaurant's own photo feed, along with some of the restaurant's advertising text. ...

There was some user outrage about the sponsored posts, but it quickly died down. For the most part, Facebook users are coming to understand that in exchange for getting the social media site "for free," it's the users, in turn, who have become "the product" — to be data-mined, scrutinized and otherwise manipulated by commercial services.

Since Facebook bought Instagram for $1 billion in April, it was only natural that this company, too, soon would be forced to find ways to maximize revenue through its only asset — the users. Nothing is free, despite what a generation of Internet users has grown to expect. ...

John Kerry's second act as Secretary of State

Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts, named by President Obama to be his next secretary of state, could have been a character out of F. Scott Fitzgerald: a Yale man, tall, handsome, aristocratic, the son of a foreign service officer, married to a wealthy, vivacious and socially conscious heiress.

He may be remembered by millions of Americans more for the videos of his windsurfing during his campaign for the presidency in 2004 than anything he ever said or did in that election, which he lost to George W. Bush, another Fitzgerald-like rich boy out of Yale and its elite Skull and Bones Society.

Yet Fitzgerald's famous observation in "The Last Tycoon" that "there are no second acts in American lives" certainly cannot be applied to the man nominated to replace departing Secretary of State Hillary Clinton as America's chief diplomat.

In fact, Kerry's appointment marks at least the second or third "second act" in his distinguished public career. After serving two combat tours in Vietnam as a swift-boat skipper, he gained notoriety by testifying as a war protester before Senate Foreign Relations Committee, where he posed these memorable questions: "How can you ask a man to be the last man to die in Vietnam? How can you ask a man to die for a mistake?"

After being criticized for discarding some of his combat medals at a protest at the Capitol, Kerry graduated from Boston College Law School, was elected lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, and in 1984 was elected to the seat in the Senate he still holds as a fifth-term.

After his narrow loss to Bush in 2004, he returned to the Senate. If confirmed, he will take the senior position in Obama's second-term cabinet in a political comeback seldom achieved by a losing presidential nominee. In fact, in the last half-century, a losing campaign for the presidency has most often meant the end of the road in American politics.

Republican nominees Thomas E. Dewey in 1944 and 1948, Barry Goldwater in 1964, Bob Dole in 1996 and Democrats Adlai Stevenson in 1952 and 1956, Hubert Humphrey in 1968, George McGovern in 1972, Walter Mondale in 1984, Michael Dukakis in 1988 and Al Gore in 2000 all got off the presidential path thereafter. McGovern briefly tried again in 1984 but to no avail.

Some presidential losers remained in public life, such as Stevenson as an appointed United Nations ambassador and McGovern as UN global ambassador on world hunger. Others, such as Goldwater, Humphrey, Kerry and Republican John McCain, returned to the Senate.

Most notably, Richard Nixon, narrowly defeated by John F. Kennedy in 1960 and then for governor in California in 1962, resurrected his political career in 1968 by edging out Humphrey for the Oval Office. However, his forced resignation in disgrace upon disclosure of his effort to cover up involvement in the Watergate scandal permanently marred that comeback.

While Kerry's anticipated service as secretary of state will disprove Fitzgerald's comment on second acts in American lives, others of the Jazz Age writer's observations remain apropos. In "The Crack-Up," he wrote, "Vitality shows not only in the ability to persist but the ability to start over." In "Tender is the Night," he observed, "Never confuse a single failure as a final defeat."

No, John Kerry may seem on the surface to casual or romantic observers of his long public career as a glamorous but essentially insubstantial figure out of the pages of the prime fiction chronicler of the dissipated 1920s. But he will embark on his new public responsibilities as a widely traveled and connected former Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman, and as such as one of the best prepared secretaries of state in recent times.

issue, too, might be included in the talks. One Republican who was briefed on the White House meeting said Boehner made it clear he would leave in place spending cuts scheduled to take effect unless alternative savings were included in any compromise to offset them. If he prevails, that would defer politically difficult decisions on curtailing government benefit programs like Medicare until 2013. Success was far from guaranteed in an atmosphere of political mistrust — even on a slimmed-down deal that postponed hard decisions about spending cuts into 2013 — in a Capitol where lawmakers grumbled about the likelihood of spending the new year holiday working. In a brief appearance in the White House briefing room, Obama referred to “dysfunction in Washington,” and said the American public is “not going to have any patience for a politically self-inflicted wound to our economy. Not right now.” If there is no compromise, he said he expects Reid to put legislation on the floor to prevent tax increases on the middle class and extend unemployment benefits — an implicit challenge to Republicans to dare to vote against what polls show is popular.

He volunteers his time and talent, as do his wife Glory and their daughters Taylor and Brittany, to many organizations and events. He’s a past president of Salem Rotary Club and past vice president of the Salem High School Alumni Association, another honoree. The program bio said Zamarelli “has made a commitment to support those grass roots and hometown organizations which meet many local needs and improve the lives of the citizens.” Whether its area students and their school groups or local volunteer fire departments and historical organizations or charitable organizations such as the Salvation Army, they’ve all benefitted from the philanthropic spirit expressed by the Salem Computer Center and Zamarelli. “I think it’s the least I can do. You have to give something back,” Zamarelli said. The Salem High School Alumni Association gives back by providing graduating high school seniors and those who are in college funding to help them make something of themselves and perhaps come back to the community to give back in return. Since its founding of a scholarship fund in 1903 with a $1,000 bond, alumni, teachers and friends of the organization have increased the value of the association’s endowment to more than $7.8 million, according to the program bio. Last spring alone, SHSAA awarded $283,375 in scholarships to 56 seniors and 13 alumni. As of September, the association had given more than $5.2 million in scholarships. SHSAA President Dr. Matt Yerkey accepted the Special Recognition for Valley Impact award on the organization’s behalf. He’s one of those success stories who came back to the community and established a successful practice. A 1982 SHS graduate, he remembered receiving one of those SHSAA awards. He said SHSAA is the largest endowment of any scholarship fund in the state of Ohio for high schools. He credited the group’s success to some very successful and generous donors and to great leadership. “It was nice to be recognized throughout the valley for what we do,” he said about the award. BUSINESS HIGHLIGHTS

Fewer US banks failing as industry strengthens

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. banks are ending the year with their best profits since 2006 and fewer failures than at any time since the financial crisis struck in 2008. They're helping support an economy slowed by high unemployment, flat pay, sluggish manufacturing and anxious consumers.

As the economy heals from the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, more people and businesses are taking out — and repaying — loans.

And for the first time since 2009, banks' earnings growth is being driven by higher revenue — a healthy trend. Banks had previously managed to boost earnings by putting aside less money for possible losses.

Dockworkers strike averted for now at US ports

NEW YORK (AP) — Dockworkers along the East Coast and the Gulf of Mexico agreed Friday to extend their contract for more than a month, averting a weekend strike that could have crippled major ports from Boston to Houston and bottled up billions of dollars' worth of cargo.

Talks aimed at reaching a new contract covering the 14,500 longshoremen will continue during the extension, which runs through Feb. 6.

The dockworkers' union and an alliance of port operators and shipping lines agreed to the extension after resolving one of the stickier points in their negotiations, involving royalty payments to longshoremen for each container they unload. Details were not disclosed.

Champagne loses fizz in Europe after tough year

PARIS (AP) — Europeans are finding fewer reasons to pop open a bottle of Champagne as another year of economic troubles and high unemployment saps the region's appetite for the finer things. But while the latest industry figures show that sales might be on the wane in Europe, other markets, particularly Japan and the United States, are developing a taste for a glass of bubbly.

In what is certain to be bad news for the vineyards, France — Champagne's largest market — is drinking fewer bottles. Sales of Champagne for the country were down 4.9 percent, and 5 percent elsewhere in the 27-country European Union, in the first nine months of 2012 compared with the same period in 2011, according to CIVC, the national association of growers and producers of the wine.

Nineteen months of rising unemployment and growing fears that the worst is yet to come have taken their toll on France — nearly seven in 10 French are worried about their country's future, according to a poll.

US pending home sales rise to highest in 2 1/2 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — A measure of Americans who signed contracts to buy homes increased last month to its highest level in two and a half years, the latest sign of improvement in the once-battered housing market. The National Association of Realtors said Friday that its seasonally adjusted pending home sales index rose 1.7 percent in November from October to 106.4. That's the highest since April 2010, when a homebuyer tax credit caused a spike in sales. And after excluding those months when the tax credit was available, it's the best reading since February 2007. The increase followed a 5 percent gain in October and suggests higher sales of previously occupied homes in the coming months. There's generally a one- to two-month lag between a signed contract and a completed sale.

UK's Pearson invests in Barnes & Noble's Nook

LONDON (AP) — Pearson, the U.K. publisher and education company, is to take a 5 percent stake in Barnes & Noble's NOOK e-reader as technology companies seek new inroads into the potentially lucrative business of digital textbooks for schools.

Pearson PLC will pay $89.5 million cash for a 5 percent stake in NOOK Media LLC which includes the bookseller's e-reader and tablets, its digital bookstore and its 674 stores serving U.S. colleges. Barnes & Noble will hold 78.2 percent of the business and Microsoft will have about 16.8 percent, the company said Friday.

Major tech companies have looked for inroads into the industry, seeing tablets like the iPad and the NOOK as replacements for the dozens of books that students must lug to and from school each day.

HP says government probes troubled Autonomy unit

NEW YORK (AP) — Autonomy, the British business software company now owned by Hewlett-Packard Co., is facing a Justice Department investigation over improper accounting under previous management, according to HP. In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission late Thursday, HP said Justice officials had informed the company on Nov. 21 that they were opening an investigation into the allegations, which HP said in November that it had uncovered after a senior Autonomy executive came forward. HP also reiterated that it provided information to the SEC and the U.K. Serious Fraud Office related to "accounting improprieties, disclosure failures and misrepresentations at Autonomy."

Fearful of ban, frenzied buyers swarm gun stores

NEW YORK (AP) — The phones at Red's Trading Post wouldn't stop ringing. Would-be customers from as far away as New York wanted to know if the Twin Falls, Idaho gun shop had firearms in stock. Others clamored to find out if their orders had been shipped.

Overwhelmed, gun store manager Ryan Horsley had to do what no employee would ever think of doing just days before Christmas: He disconnected the phone lines for three whole days.

"We had to shut everything off," says Horsley, whose family has owned Red's Trading Post, the state's oldest gun shop, since 1936. "We were swamped in the store and online."

The phones at gun shops across the country are ringing off the hook. Demand for firearms, ammunition and bulletproof gear has surged since the Dec. 14 massacre in Newtown, Conn., that took the lives of 20 schoolchildren and six teachers and administrators. The shooting sparked calls for tighter gun control measures, especially for military-style assault weapons like the ones used in Newtown and in the Aurora, Colo., movie theater shooting earlier this year. The prospect of a possible weapons ban has sent gun enthusiasts into a panic and sparked a frenzy of buying at stores and gun dealers nationwide.

Assault rifles are sold out across the country. Rounds of .223 bullets, like those used in the AR-15 type Bushmaster rifle used in Newtown, are scarce. Stores are struggling to restock their shelves. Gun and ammunition makers are telling retailers they will have to wait months to get more.

Store owners who have been in the business for years say they have never seen demand like this before.

When asked how much sales have increased in the past few weeks, Horsley just laughed.

"We haven't even had a chance to look at it," he says. Horsley spends his days calling manufacturers around the country trying to buy more items for the store. Mainly, they tell him he has to wait.

Franklin Armory, a firearm maker in Morgan Hill, Calif., is telling dealers that it will take six months to fulfill their orders. The company plans to hire more workers and buy more machines to catch up, says Franklin Armory's President Jay Jacobson.

The shortage is leaving many would-be gun owners empty handed.

William Kotis went to a gun show in Winston-Salem, N.C., last weekend hoping to buy a rifle for target shooting. Almost everything was sold out.

"Assault rifles were selling like crazy," says Kotis, who is president and CEO of Kotis Holdings, a real estate development company based in Greensboro. "People are stockpiling."

He left without buying anything. Luke Orlando's parents were able to get him the 12-gauge shotgun he wanted for Christmas to bird hunt, but his uncle wasn't as lucky.

"At Christmas dinner, my uncle expressed outrage that after waiting six months to use his Christmas bonus to purchase an AR-15, they are sold out and back ordered over a year," says Orlando, 18, a student at the University of Texas.

No organization publically releases gun sales data. The only way to measure demand is by the number of background checks that are conducted when someone wants to buy a firearm. Those numbers are released by the Federal Reserve Bureau every month. Data for December is not out yet. But the Federal Bureau of Investigation says that it did 16.8 million firearm background checks as of the end of November, up more than 2 percent from a year ago.

The Colorado Bureau of Investigation, which handles background checks for the state, can't keep up with the number of requests it is getting. The bureau has pulled staff from other units and increased its hours, says spokesperson Susan Medina.

Many firearm dealers and manufacturers say that Obama's comments since the Newtown school shooting are driving demand.

James Zimmerman of SelwayArmory.com, a website that sells guns, ammunition and knives, says that sales really took off on Dec. 19 after Obama held a White House press conference announcing that Vice President Joe Biden would lead a team tasked with coming up with "concrete proposals" to curb gun violence.

That day, one customer ordered 32,000 rounds of ammunition from SelwayArmory.com, worth close to $18,000. The order had to be shipped from the company's Lolo, Mont., office to Kentucky on a freight truck. "I've done more sales in the week after the 19th than I have the whole year," says Zimmerman, who launched SelwayArmory.com in 2009.

At Lady Liberty Gunsmithing LLC in Atlantic City, N.J., a customer called last week asking if a pistol he wanted was available.

When he was told there was only one left, he drove more than two hours from Newark, N.J., to buy it that same day.

ROTARY CLUB of SALEM

Peace Through Service

Sakuji Tanaka

Rotary International President
2012-13

Rotary Club of Salem helps local organizations and families: Rotary Club of Salem President Mary Winch at a recent meeting presented checks totaling nearly $3,000 to two local Boy Scout troops for their help with the club's flag project this year, Mobile Meals Inc. of Salem, the Salem Gingerbread Day project and the Salem Interact Club for RYLA scholarships next year. The funds awarded are part of the monies raised by the club's activities throughout the year. During the holiday season the club also assisted with ringing bells for the Salvation Army and collecting gifts for the Create-a-Smile program.

Rotary Club of Salem names Student of the Month: West Branch senior Kyla Sharp was named the Rotary Club of Salem's Student of the Month for November. While at West Branch High School Kyla has served as treasurer of National Honor Society, vice president of her class and president of Future Farmers of America; and has been a member of Student Council, the Yearbook Staff, Ruriteens, SADD and Environmental Club. She excels both in the classroom and on the athletic field where she is a three-sport athlete participating in volleyball, basketball and track. Upon graduation Kyla will attend The Ohio State University where she plans to study Occupational Therapy. Flanking Sharp are Rotarian Steve Bailey, left, and club President Mary Winch.

Rotary Dictionary Project Promotes Literacy: During the month of December, 300 area third-grade students at Reilly, St. Paul and United Local schools received dictionaries courtesy of the Salem Rotary Club. The program, which is now in its 10th year, is just one way that the Salem Rotary Club highlights Rotary's commitment to literacy through the avenue of community service. This initiative provides the club with the opportunity to invest nearly $4,000 in the youth of our community.

Questions, call David Mollenkopf, 234-567-5839. Thank You!

The start of the new year is a great time to submit your Rotary flag application. For the rate of $25, you can purchase a flag subscription for yourself or to give as a gift. The price includes flag placement on five holidays in 2013. Once subscribed, a Rotary member will place a holder in the yard and for each of the holidays, flags will be placed and removed. Rotary will maintain the flags, so there is no work required for the homeowner. For this year, subscribers must live within the Salem School District limits. With success, the project is looking to expand to other areas in the future. To take advantage of this offer please complete the subscription form on this page and mail it along with your payment to: Salem Rotary, P.O. Box 1025, Salem OH 44460.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
12/29/12

Name That Feeling

Feelings are hard to accurately pin down with a name or description, especially because they not only happen in the moment in which they are triggered, but continue happening as they resonate and evolve with every recollection. The Cancer moon lingers in a void-of-course phase inspiring a murky re-counting and reinterpretation of yesterday's emotions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Typically, there is all kinds of guilt and shame around being selfish, but should there be? You count, too. If you delight yourself, you've made one person happy, and that's a start.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Don't be fooled into thinking that your surroundings don't offer what you need to thrive and grow your talents. There is more to mine there, and today will be proof of it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Just relax. What's broken will be fixed, what's missing will be found, what's done is done. There's no need to run. Your easygoing stride will take you as far as you want to go.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). The moon in your sign magnifies your emotions. With so much extra feeling to share, you'll wake up sleepwalkers and bring sensation to the numb. Dates are favored tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). A cozy, predictable relationship will be much less so now. You may not be sure of how to take the change in tone just yet, but let this develop more before you weigh in.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's still too early to position yourself as an expert in some regard, but you can help others with what you know. Just be sure to qualify the help by saying, "I'm not an expert, but..."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll be proactive in relationships, teaching people how to treat you. You'll reward loved ones when they are behaving, and you'll avoid having to put up with misbehavior.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll get good answers, accurate and thorough. Now that you know what's going to make a project work, the question becomes: Are you willing to do that?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You'll meet those with a common purpose. Combine resources. You'll achieve together what you couldn't do alone. You'll be especially compatible with Leo and Aries.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Many people will take a break now, but not you. A relentless inner drive has you soldiering on with ambitious works. This is exactly why you'll prevail in 2013.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Are you getting used to the nervy excitement caused by Mars in your part of the sky? You may feel like you need an outlet for your aggressive energy, and exercise will be a good temporary fix.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). List making is lucky, and you'll enjoy crossing things off, adding things and crossing more things off. The activity gets you organized, makes you aware of your priorities and may even make you rich.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Dec. 29). Strip away some of your self-imposed rules, and a spark of new energy sends you unstoppable through the first three months of the year. In April, reassess. You'll likely need to refresh your skills and assemble a different team for the next turn of events. Loved ones want your attention and some travel time in June. Aries and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 48, 27, 19, 43 and 11.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "Lately, I can't talk to my boyfriend of seven years, a Pisces. We fight constantly and not in a good way. We argue and never come to a conclusion. Everything is heated and emotional, and I'm about through with it, but I can't seem to make the break. What should an Aquarius do?"

It sounds like you've already made up your mind, so forget not being able to make the break. My advice is to just do it. Be strong and do it. Do it before your birthday — the sooner the better. With Mars in your sign now, you may be a little feistier than usual, but it doesn't mean the problems you have aren't real. Mars is a warrior and a destroyer. Sometimes things have to be broken down to be built back up. So make a clean break now — no waffling. Avoid accepting or assigning blame. Avoid using the word "should." Avoid apologizing. Be compassionate but direct and decisive. Handle the details and move on. If this relationship is ever going to be, it will be after a nice long break.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Ted Danson is perennially suave, a distinctly Capricorn gift, as the sea goat has a reputation for preserving the very best qualities and keeping them fresh for a lifetime. Also, Capricorns often seem young at any age, which is why it's not surprising that Danson can hold his own with young hipsters like Jason Schwartzman and Zach Galifianakis.

Hidden notes of love brighten days

Heloise

Dear Heloise: My husband thought we should share a family tradition with your readers because he loves it. Our family lives all around the U.S., and we are always trying to find time to visit. Before we leave, we hide little folded (and dated) NOTES around their homes with messages about our stay, our love of them, wishing we could see them again soon, and silly thoughts about little things that will mean something to them.

We put them in their car glove box, cereal boxes, taped to the back of bottles, between their DVDs, in linen closets between towels, in the freezer, in bathroom drawers, in winter boots (leave these in summer so they will find them months down the road), in pockets of coats and under lamp bottoms.

The notes are warm reminders of the visit and usually bring smiles. I found one recently in my home that was 12 years old. My sisters started this for our mother when she would feel sad as we were all about to leave. She loved it! — Skeeter Gurzick, Omaha, Neb.

Charming! I sometimes slip notes into my husband's luggage when he leaves for a trip. Surprise! — Heloise

HANDY OVEN MITT

Dear Heloise: When I'm cooking a meal, not everything is ready at the same time. First is the baked potatoes. I keep them hot by putting them in an oven mitt. They stay hot and ready to serve with the rest of the meal. — Ken Leach, The Villages, Fla.

Potatoes can be used in so many ways and often are a part of a meal or even a meal in itself. One of the potato recipes I enjoy the most is a recipe that my mother, the original Heloise (1919-1977), brought back from China in the 1940s. It is Heloise's Peking (Double-Baked, Stuffed) Potatoes. If you would like to try it, send for my pamphlet Heloise's Main Dishes and More. All you need to do is send $3 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (65 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Main Dish, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. This pamphlet also has Heloise's Southwestern Veggie Rice and Mother's Chinese Beets. — Heloise

Looking for changes in slacker boyfriend

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Lance" for about two years now. We communicate well, have great chemistry and are very affectionate with each other. Lance is kind, creative (he's an artist) and considerate. However, he lacks ambition.

I'm a big thinker who wants big things in life. I have traveled extensively and am very involved in the world of academia. Lance works in a bar three nights a week and plays video games when I'm not around. I know from our conversations that he is intelligent and capable of doing so much more.

Is there any way to motivate him without nagging? I feel I may be selling myself short by being with someone who is content to sit on the couch. On the other hand, I have dated more ambitious men who turned out to be jerks. Must women have to choose between nice guys who finish last and dominating power mongers? — ASKING TOO MUCH? IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR ASKING TOO MUCH?: The male sex is not divided into two categories — nice guys who finish last and power mongers. If you look around, you will see there are control freaks who finish last, and nice men who work hard at their jobs or professions and are successful. If you feel you are selling yourself short by being with Lance, then you probably are. If you would like to motivate him, tell him you think you need to be with someone who has more direction in life. If that doesn't galvanize him to action, nothing will.

DEAR ABBY: After being in a four-year relationship with an alcoholic who was emotionally, verbally and at times physically abusive, I got out. I have moved back with my parents to save money so I can get my own place. When I told my mother about some of the incidents that happened, she said, "I know how you can be." My father seemed more supportive — until recently.

My ex has a son I grew close to, as did my parents. Last week, I found out my ex had contacted them and his son will be coming here for a visit. Abby, I don't want my ex to know anything about my current life! I don't know if I can forgive them for this. Any advice would be greatly appreciated. — HURT DAUGHTER IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR HURT DAUGHTER: I'll try. When people are attracted to — and stay with — a partner who is emotionally, verbally and sometimes physically abusive, it's sometimes because there was dysfunction in their upbringing. You don't say how long you have been staying with your parents, but if there is no alternative, you need to stick to your plan and stay until you have enough money to rent a place of your own. When the boy arrives, greet him warmly and spend as little time there as possible. Give him no information about your work or your social life other than to say you are doing fine and are very happy. And as soon as you have enough money to establish some independence, get out of there.

Sick of cleaning up after husband, slobby teen girls

Annie's Mailbox

I'm sick of being the bad guy and living in a slovenly house that no one else cares about. I've talked to them until I'm blue in the face. I've tried letting things go to see whether they'd eventually do something, and that doesn't work either. Usually, I end up so frustrated that I throw a big hissy fit and clean it myself.

Dear Annie: My husband and I have been married for 23 years, and we have two teenage daughters. Our biggest issue is disciplining the kids. I think they should do more household chores. My husband agrees in theory, but does nothing to hold them accountable when they don't cooperate, so the burden of discipline falls on me.

Another starting QB

Thad Lewis to start for Browns against Steelers

BEREA (AP) — Once practice ended on Friday, quarterback Thad Lewis was approached by Browns coach Pat Shurmur, who had great news for the third-stringer.

“He said, ‘You’re the man,’” Lewis said.

And just like that, Lewis became Cleveland’s starter Sunday in the season finale at Pittsburgh, where he will take his first regular-season NFL snaps against the Steelers and their No. 1-ranked defense.

“It’s exciting,” Lewis said. “It’s a blessing for a childhood dream come true.”

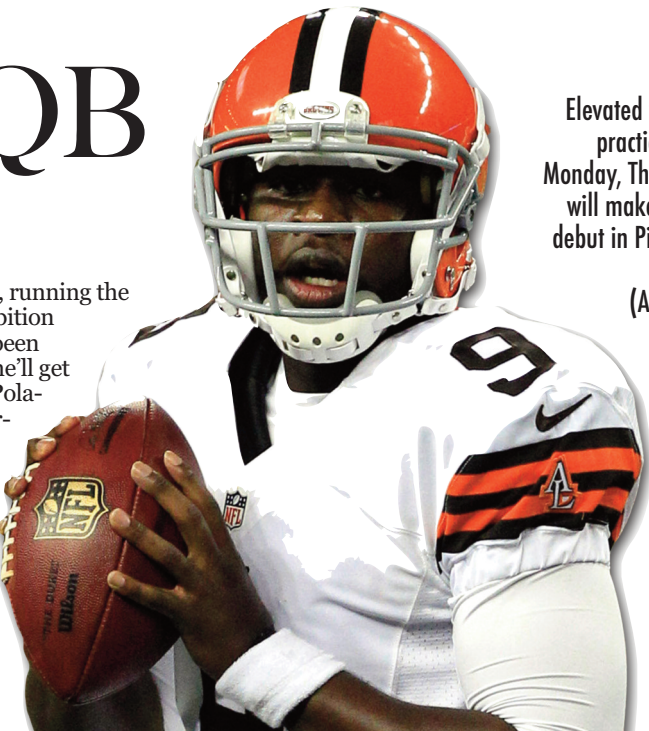

Shoulder injuries to starter Brandon Weeden and No. 2 QB Colt McCoy will give Lewis a chance to show what he can do after almost three seasons spent on practice squads, running the scout team and finishing off exhibition games with other backups. He’s been waiting for his opportunity, and he’ll get it against James Harrison, Troy Polamalu and Co. — amid a sea of Terrible Towels.

Lewis never considered his first start would come against one of the league’s most feared defenses.

“Part of my childhood dream was to be a starter one day in the NFL. Who it was against, I didn’t have a visual of that.”

Cavaliers quelled by Atlanta

Teague leads Hawks past Cleveland 102-94

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jeff Teague scored a career-high 27 points and the Atlanta Hawks scored the game’s final nine points to beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 102-94 on Friday night.

Teague’s jumper from the foul line gave the Hawks a 95-94 lead with 2:32 remaining to spark the late run and send Atlanta to its third straight win.

Kyrie Irving led Cleveland with 28 points, but the Cavaliers failed to score in the final 2:53 after taking a 94-93 lead.

Lou Williams scored 16 points for Atlanta, which is 8-4 on the road. Al Horford added 14 points and 11 rebounds.

Dion Waiters scored 18 points for Cleveland, which had its season-high two-game winning streak end.

Cavaliers center Anderson Varajeo, the league’s leading rebounder, missed his fifth straight game with a bruised right knee. He’s also been ruled out of Saturday’s game against Brooklyn. Guard Daniel Gibson left the game in the second quarter with a head injury and did not return.

Irving’s drive gave Cleveland a 94-93 lead with 2:53 to play, but Teague’s jumper gave Atlanta the lead for good. Horford followed with a jump shot for a three-point

SALEM — The Salem Quakers headed to the locker room at halftime of Friday night’s match-up with Carrollton faced with a deficit for the first time all season. Playing on their home floor, a place they had vowed to protect at the onset of the season, the Quakers responded in the second and outscored the Warriors 41-25 over the final 24 minutes for a 64-55 win.

“I’m proud of the way we played in the second half,” Salem head coach Rich Hart said. “We were awful in the first half. I think we were fortunate to be down by seven at halftime.”

Carrollton came out shooting, getting a three by Andrew Collins to start off the game to put Salem down early. The Quakers came back, rattling off seven straight to put Salem in control at 9-5 with 5:02 to play.

Carrollton, however, controlled the final five minutes of play, using a 14-6 run to close out the first frame.

Turnovers, poor rebounding and inability to successfully move the basketball marred a first quarter that resulted in Salem trailing 19-15 after

Ohio finishes season 9-4 with 45-14 win

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The final pass of Tyler Tettleton’s dizzying early-game onslaught was beautiful — a 68-yard touchdown heave to Chase Cochran over two defenders.

Ohio coach Frank Solich couldn’t have designed a better beginning to a football game. And the end result — a dominant 45-14 victory over Louisiana-Monroe in the Independence Bowl on Friday — wasn’t too bad either.

“It was probably as complete of ballgame as we’ve played in some time,” Solich said. “I think our guys played with great intensity and a great deal of heart.”

Status in limbo for Steelers veterans

Some players may make final appearance in black and gold Sunday

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For the first time since he was taken in the third round in the 2009 draft, Mike Wallace will miss a regular-season game for the Steelers.

It might well be the first of many games Pittsburgh plays without the speedster receiver going forward.

An injury in his left hip and hamstring area will prevent Wallace from playing in the Steelers’ season finale Sunday against the Cleveland Browns. He will be an unrestricted free agent, leaving his status with the team for beyond this season in question.

Wallace isn’t the only veteran who might have attended his final practice as a Steelers player Friday. On the heels of a non-winning season and with salary-cap issues upcoming, Pittsburgh (7-8) has some decisions to make on several longtime stalwarts who have been tenured contributors to championship teams.

Wallace, Casey Hampton, Rashard Mendenhall, Max Starks, James Harrison, Larry Foote and Charlie Batch have a combined 59 years of service for the Steelers, 12 starts in Super Bowls for the team and 11 championship rings.

There is reason to believe the game against Cleveland (5-10) will be the final one for many in that group as part of the organization.

“I don’t know who’s going to be out the door or who’s going to be re-signed, but it’s always a business first,” Foote said. “From a selfish standpoint on defense, we were No. 1 in the league — so bring us all back, keep us all. But I never know what’s their plans and (general manager) Kevin Colbert can run a team better than I can.”

1957 — Tobin Rote passes for four touchdowns and scores another to give the Detroit Lions a 59-14 victory over the Cleveland Browns in the NFL championship game.

1961 — Wilt Chamberlain of the Philadelphia Warriors scores 60 points against the Los Angeles Lakers at Hershey, Pa., the future site of his 100-point game.

1963 — The Chicago Bears, who won the Western Conference title by allowing only 10 points per game, play up to form in a 14-10 victory over the New York Giants for the NFL title at Wrigley Field.

1984 — Wayne Gretzky of the Edmonton Oilers scores his 100th point in the 35th game of the season, a 6-3 victory over the Detroit Red Wings.

2002 — Marvin Harrison catches six passes for a season-low 28 yards in a 20-13 win over Jacksonville, finishing his record-breaking year with 143 receptions and 1,722 yards — the fourth-most in league history.

2006 — Texas Tech spots Minnesota a 31-point, third-quarter lead, then rallies for a stunning 44-41 overtime victory in the Insight Bowl, the largest comeback in Division I-A bowl history. The previous record for a bowl comeback was 30 points, set by Marshall against East Carolina in the 2001 GMAC Bowl.

2007 — Joe Paterno's 500th game as Penn State coach ends the way most have, with a win. The Nittany Lions erase an early 14-point deficit to beat Texas A&M 24-17 at the Alamo Bowl. Paterno, 372-125-3, is the college football leader in bowl appearances (34) and bowl wins (23).

2007 — The New England Patriots complete a perfect regular season, finishing with a remarkable 16-0 record following a thrilling 38-35 comeback victory over the New York Giants. New England is the first NFL team since the 1972 Dolphins to win every game on the schedule, and that one was only 14-0.

SALEM FROM 1B

"That's the key," Hart said. "If we can move the basketball we are tough to beat. If we don't, we play like we did in the first half."

Andrew Collins knocked down back-to-back jumpers, the second of which from beyond the arc to stake the Warriors out to the four-point lead after one.

Anthony Shivers appeared to be the Quakers lone bright spot in the first quarter, collecting seven of his career-high 26 points on the night. Shivers was particularly effective in the press breaker, knocking down multiple mid-range jumpers from the corner.

Shivers' previous career high had been 21-points.

"Tony had a great game, and he had a couple huge rebounds. He also had a big block down low," Hart said. "Max (Wolfgang) did a super job as well. Our big guys were the difference in the game."

Salem's duo combined for 37 of the Quakers' 64 points, with Wolfgang pouring in 11 of his own and pulling down 10 boards for a double-double.

Salem didn't fare much better in the second quarter, and saw its deficit grow to as many as ten in the frame. Zade Dietz buried a trey with 2:48 to play giving Carrollton a 28-18 lead and forcing Rich Hart to call a timeout.

Coming out of the break, Salem was able to cut the deficit to seven as the teams headed into the locker rooms.

"Our main focus was getting the ball inside and to move the basketball," Hart said. "We did way too much dribbling. We panicked too much. We were putting our head down and driving to nowhere."

The Quakers opted to apply the pressure in the second half by making use of a full-court press, something they kept in their back pocket until the third quarter.

"We usually save that for the second half," Hart said. "We used it then and we were able to get some turnovers."

Dietz knocked down another triple to start off the half, resetting the Warriors' lead at ten, but Salem chipped away throughout the frame and eventually worked it back to four with 3:09 to play.

"Our kids never back down there was quite a bit of diversity with some strange things that happened in the first half," Hart said. "They kept their composure for the most part and got it done."

Baskets by Shivers and Wolfgang knotted the score at 35 for the first time since the opening quarter before Stephen Erickson converted on a three-point play to stake Carrollton back in the lead.

It didn't last long as Shivers got a basket of his own and a chance to go to the line for extra. Shivers was unable to convert on the three-point play, but the foul drawn on Stephen Erickson sent the Warriors' inside threat to the bench with four fouls.

Shivers gave the Quakers their first lead since the first quarter with an assist from Anthony Frank. Shivers and Frank combined to force a turnover by the Warriors, and a tic-tac-toe passing display between the two saw Shivers finish with the basket.

"That was huge," Hart said. "Then Wukotch hits a big basket to put us up four. Again our bench, Wuk did a nice job, Madison did a nice job, Austin Frank did a nice job. We got good contributions from a good chunk of our bench and that's been a key for us all year long."

The basket by Wukotich forced the hand of Carrollton coach Matt Voll to call a timeout. Erickson re-entered the ballgame, and converted a three-point play to cut the lead to one, but Zach Economous answered right back with a triple to keep Salem ahead for the duration.

The Quakers made use of the free-throw line over the final 1:54. Despite going just 20-32 on the evening, Shivers, Ryan Bush and Brendan Webb combined to sink 4-of-6 during that span to create a cushion.

"It was a huge atmosphere tonight, terrific, and it ought to keep getting bigger," Hart said with a smile.

Carrollton won the jayvee game 43-36. Mike Popa led Salem with nine points followed by D.J. Pullie with eight. Trey Toothman and Ryan Hoover each added five points for the Quakers.

Carrollton was led by Brandon Johnson, who netted 12 points.

The Warriors scored 20 points in each of the first two quarters to take a 40-29 half-time lead. They also outscored the Raiders in each of the final two quarters to pull away.

Ryan Mosora added 14 point and Derrick Dickson 11.

For South Range, Mason Miller had 17 points and Garrett Anderson contributed 11 points and seven rebounds. Robby Seman added nine points and Tyler Beverly eight.

The Raiders dropped to 3-5 and will play at Western Reserve next Friday.

South Range won the reserve game 41-32 as Cole Berry scored 11 points.

Salem 44, Marlinton 32

SALEM — The Salem freshman basketball team dropped Marlinton Thursday 44-32.

Leading the Quakers was Trey Toothman with 13 points. D.J. Pullie added 12.

Salem (6-2, 5-2 NBC) hosts Minerva Thursday.

stricted free agent, he is seemingly destined to be on his way out.

At 38, Batch is the NFL’s oldest non-kicker, and the Steelers could elect to add some youth to the quarter-back position.

It won’t be age that keeps the Steelers from bringing Wallace back. Failure to come to an agreement on a new contract might, though.

Wallace held out through the entirety of Steelers’ training camp in Latrobe, Pa., this summer before signing a one-year tender as a re-stricted free agent. He fin-ished the year with fewer catches and receiving yards than he had in each of the previous two seasons and with a 13.1 yards-per-recep-tion that is well below his ca-reer average.

“This year obviously didn’t go exactly how I wanted it to go, but I’m happy with the start to my career and I feel like I’m on the right path to do some great things,” Wal-lace said.

Like several other Steelers after a rare non-winning sea-son, those plans just might not include Pittsburgh.

concussion in the fourth quarter when Harrison lev-eled him on a jarring tackle late in a loss at Heinz Field.

Lewis knows he has to be wary of Harrison and Pola-malu, who both seem to be all over the field.

However, he’s not worried about Harrison.

“You’ve got on a helmet and shoulder pads and if a guy is going to hit you or if you get hit, that’s what the pads is for, to protect you,” he said. “You’ve got to be tough at the quarterback po-sition. You’ve got to get up, shake it off and move on to the next play.”

As for Polamalu, Lewis said it’s imperative to know where he’s lined up.

“He’s going to be the rule breaker,” Lewis said. “You have to keep an eye on 43.”

The Browns have lost eight straight games in Pitts-burgh, and are just 5-23 against their biggest rival since 1999.

But after beating the Steel-ers in November, the Browns can sweep them for the first time since 1988 and perhaps send Shurmur out on a high note in what is likely his final game for Cleveland.

“We can walk away from this season with something to brag about,” Jackson said.

Bush nominated for JJ Huddle Player of the Week

SALEM — Salem senior Ryan Bush has been nominated for JJ Huddle’s National Guard Player of the Week for the state of Ohio. There is a poll in which fans can vote at jjhuddle.com in the high school basketball forum. Voting closes Wednesday, Jan. 3 at 12:30 p.m.

The winner will receive a banner presented by the National Guard for his re-spective school as well as a trophy.

Pryor to get 1st start at QB for Raiders

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Raiders are ready to get a long look at Terrelle Pryor to see if he can be their quarterback of the future.

Pryor got the nod to start Sunday’s season finale in San Diego in place of the injured Carson Palmer. After being deemed not ready to be the backup when Palmer got hurt last week in Carolina, Pryor now gets the chance to make his first career start.

“We know what his strengths are, we know what his weaknesses are,” coach Dennis Allen said Friday. “But really, to give him an opportunity to go out in a game, against a division opponent, at their place, and give him a chance to play, it gives us a view into the future.”

Allen said he told Pryor and Matt Leinart early in the week that he was leaning to Pryor but wanted to see how practice developed. He said he thought Pryor re-sponded well and now wants to see what his athleticism can bring to a team that has failed to score a touchdown the past two weeks.

Pryor said he’s confident he is ready to start his first game since the Sugar Bowl for Ohio State against Arkansas on Jan. 4, 2011, but admitted to having some an-xiety.

“I’m nervous. Until the first play I’m going to be nervous,” he said. “I’m human like you guys. I’m human like everybody. I just happen to play one of the best sports in the world. I’ll be nervous until the first snap.”

Pryor was taken in the third round of the supplemental draft in August 2011 by late Raiders owner Al Davis. Pryor missed almost all of training camp and then served a five-game suspension before he could be activated. He got on the field just once as a rookie — committing a false start before his only play — as he needed to work on his footwork and mechanics.

Ryan wants to be Jets coach for ‘next 15 years’

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. (AP) — Rex Ryan has no plans to go anywhere.

Doesn’t want to, he said.

The feisty New York Jets coach opened his news conference Friday by de-nouncing a published report that said he would welcome being fired if owner Woody Johnson doesn’t make significant personnel and coaching changes to the offense.

“There was a report that was untrue,” Ryan said. “The fact is, and it’s simple: This is the only team that I want to coach. Period. This is my team. These are my players. I don’t want to coach somebody else’s players. This is the team I want to coach.”

With the Jets (6-9) out of the playoffs for the second straight season, Ryan’s job status has become somewhat tenuous in his fourth year. But Ryan said he was “mad as a hornet” when he read the Daily News story, and immediately called Johnson to deny it. The paper, which quoted unidentified sources, said it stood by the report. The back page carried a picture of Ryan and a headline that said: “Rex Wants Out ... Unless Woody spends on Jets’ woeful offense.”

Ryan said he was contacted by the reporter Thursday night, but his response wasn’t included. Thompson said it was an off-the-record comment and as such was not published.

“There’s no bigger Jet than me,” Ryan insisted. “I want to be the Jets’ head coach for the next 15 years.”

Several Jets players said Ryan talked about the story with them in the team meeting earlier in the day, but declined to elaborate on what was said.

The Jets are preparing to finish their season at Buffalo on Sunday. In limbo are the futures of Ryan, general manager Mike Tannenbaum, offensive coordinator Tony Sparano and quarterbacks Tim Tebow and Mark Sanchez.

Maybe Andy Reid isn’t going anywhere

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Andy Reid has been fired by nearly everyone except the man in charge.

It’s a foregone conclusion in Philadelphia and around the NFL that Reid will coach his last game with the Eagles on Sunday at the New York Giants. Fans already have a wish list for a new coach and the media has speculated for months about Reid’s successor.

But owner Jeffrey Lurie has said nothing. Lurie hasn’t spoken to reporters since Aug. 30, which is when he said another 8-8 season would be “unacceptable.”

A careful look at the questions Lurie faced and his exact answers during that news conference leaves open the possibility that maybe Reid may not get fired.

It doesn’t seem likely that he’ll step down.

“I want to coach. That’s what I want to do,” Reid said Friday.

Reid has one year left on his contract, so Lurie made it clear the last time he spoke publicly that he wouldn’t discuss a contract extension with Reid’s agent, Bob LaMonte, until after the season.

Ring sparks talk of Wozniacki-McIlroy engagement

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Australian media reported Friday that Caroline Wozniacki arrived to play at the Brisbane International with a diamond ring on her left ring finger, sparking speculation that she and boyfriend Rory McIlroy had be-come engaged.

The Australian Associated Press and other media outlets said Wozniacki wore the ring at the airport and as she prepared for her afternoon practice session at the Queensland Tennis Centre but removed it to play on court.

McIlroy, the world’s No. 1 golfer, accompanied Wozniacki on her trip Down Under.

The Brisbane International begins Sunday with Wozniacki’s first match in a tournament that includes Serena Williams and Maria Sharapova, if fit.

Va. Tech edges Rutgers in OT in Russell Bowl

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Cody Journell kicked a 22-yard field goal on the first pos-session of overtime to help Virginia Tech beat Rutgers 13-10 in the Russell Athletic Bowl on Friday night.

Virginia Tech (7-6) won its third straight game to avoid its first losing season since 1992.

Rutgers (9-4) had a chance to tie it in overtime, but Nick Borgese missed a 42-yard field-goal attempt to the right.

Virginia Tech trailed 10-0 at the half, then rallied in the final 30 minutes thanks to some timely turnovers and offense. Quarterback Logan Thomas struggled in the first and finished with a pair of interceptions, but also had 192 passing yards and the game’s only passing touchdown.

The Associated Press
NHL LOCKOUT AT A GLANCE
DATE: Friday, Dec. 28.
DAY: 104.
LAST NEGOTIATIONS: In-person talks Dec. 23 in New Jersey. Bargaining conference call Dec. 14.
NEXT NEGOTIATIONS: Scheduled for Sunday in New York.
GAMES LOST: 625 (all games through Jan. 4, including New Year's Day Winter Classic, and All-Star weekend).
NEW OFFER: The NHL made a new proposal to the players' association Thursday. The offer is believed to include an individual contract limit of six years to a free agent or even for a club signing its own player, raising the salary variance from one year to another to 10 percent, up from 5 percent; and one compliance buyout for the 2013-14 season that wouldn't count toward a team's salary cap. It would be included in the overall players' share of income. The players' association held a negotiating call with its executive board on Friday, with the negotiating committee Friday to discuss the offer.
The sides are expected to talk via conference call Saturday, and have made plans to meet in New York on Sunday.
WHAT WE MISSED: A five-game slate of games was lost Friday night, including the Toronto Maple Leafs visiting the rival Ottawa Senators. Ottawa finished second in the Northeast Division last season and claimed an Eastern Conference playoff spot with 92 points. Toronto was 12 points back in fourth place and failed to qualify for the postseason.
ON THIS DAY LAST YEAR: The Dallas Stars activated goalie Kirk Lehtonen from the injured list after he missed 12 games because of a lower-body injury. Lehtonen led the NHL with 13 wins at the time of his injury on Nov. 16 in a game against Phoenix. While Dallas was without Lehtonen back, the Stars put defenseman Stephane Robidas on the injured list after he sat out three games due to a lower-body injury.

Louisiana-Monroe had a chance to cut into the deficit just before halftime, but coach Todd Berry's gamble to go for a touchdown instead of a short field goal backfired when Browning's final pass of the half sailed harmlessly out the back of Berry's gamble wasn't a surprise — the Warhawks had gained a reputation for unorthodox play-calling during their record-setting season. But nothing seemed to work against the Bobcats, and the large ULM fan contingent had mostly disappeared from the stands by the end of the third quarter.

Trains carrying more oil across US amid boom

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Energy companies behind the oil boom on the Northern Plains are increasingly turning to an industrial-age workhorse — the locomotive — to move their crude to refineries across the U.S., as plans for new pipelines stall and existing lines can't keep up with demand.

Delivering oil thousands of miles by rail from the heartland to refineries on the East, West and Gulf coasts costs more, but it can mean increased profits — up to $10 or more a barrel — because of higher oil prices on the coasts. That works out to roughly $700,000 per train.

The parade of mile-long trains carrying hazardous material out of North Dakota and Montana and across the country has experts and federal regulators concerned. Rail transport is less safe than pipelines, they say, and the proliferation of oil trains raises the risk of a major derailment and spill.

Since 2009, the number of train cars carrying crude hauled by major railroads has jumped from about 10,000 a year to a projected 200,000 in 2012. Much of it has been in the Northern Plains' Bakken crude patch, but companies say oil trains are rolling or will be soon from Texas, Colorado and western Canada.

"This is all occurring very rapidly, and history teaches that when those things happen, unfortunately, the next thing that is going to occur would be some sort of disaster," said Jim Hall, a transportation consultant and former chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Rail companies said the industry places a priority on safety and has invested heavily in track upgrades, provided emergency training and taken other measures to guard against accidents. There have been no major oil train derailments from the Bakken, according to federal regulators.

Union Pacific Railroad CEO Jack Koraleski said hauling oil out of places like North Dakota will be a long-term business for railroads because trains are faster than pipelines, reliable and offer a variety of destinations.

"The railroads are looking at this as a unique opportunity, a game-changing opportunity for their business," said Jeffery Elliot, a rail expert with the New York-based consulting firm Oliver Wyman.

BNSF Railway Co., the prime player in the Bakken, has bolstered its oil train capacity to a million barrels a day and expects that figure to increase further. To accommodate the growth, in part, the railroad is sinking $197 million into track upgrades and other improvements in Montana and North Dakota.

BNSF is also increasing train sizes, from 100 oil cars per train to as many as 118.

Larger trains are harder to control, and that increases the chances of something going wrong, safety experts said. State and local emergency officials worry about a derailment in a population center or an environmentally sensitive area such as a river crossing.

Rail accidents occur 34 times more frequently than pipeline ones for every ton of crude or other hazardous material shipped comparable distances, according to a recent study by the Manhattan Institute, a conservative think tank. The Association of American Railroads contends the study was flawed but acknowledges the likelihood of a rail accident is double or triple the chance of a pipeline problem.

The environmental fears carry an ironic twist: Oil trains are gaining popularity in part because of a shortage of pipeline capacity — a problem that has been worsened by environmental opposition to such projects as TransCanada's stalled Keystone XL pipeline. That project would carry Bakken and Canadian crude to the Gulf of Mexico.

Wayde Schafer, a North Dakota spokesman for the Sierra Club, described rail as "the greater of two evils" because trains pass through cities, over waterways and through wetlands that pipelines can be built to avoid.

"It's an accident waiting to happen. It's going to be a mess and we don't know where that mess is going to be," Schafer said.

For oil companies, the embrace of rail is a matter of expediency. Oil-loading rail terminals can be built in a matter of months, versus three to five years for pipelines to clear regulatory hurdles and be put into service, said Justin Kringstad of the North Dakota Pipeline Authority. Although more pipelines are in the works, he said moving oil by rail will continue.

The surge comes at the right time for railroads: Coal shipments — a mainstay of the rail industry — have suffered because of competition from cheap natural gas.

In the eastern U.S., CSX and Norfolk Southern railroads haven't seen as much growth because oil from the Marcellus Shale area of Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York is close enough to refineries that trucks haul the crude.

Yet BNSF is beginning to haul Bakken crude east to Chicago, where it hands off the tank cars to CSX or Norfolk Southern for delivery to Eastern refineries. It has also sent oil to the West Coast, a trend that could increase if Alaska crude production falters, as some industry observers are predicting.

The growth will require significant upgrades to already congested rail lines, industry analysts said.

Overall, crude oil shipments still represent less than 1 percent of all carloads. And there are far more dangerous materials aboard the nation's trains, including explosives, poisonous gases and other industrial chemicals.

But emergency officials are increasingly wary of major accidents involving oil trains, which carry far more cargo than some other hazardous-material trains.
